laughed at before—which brings to mind the fact, as the philosopher put it, that there is nothing new under the calcium.

An optimistic view of Twirly Whirly saw in it a symposium of color, very pleasing, warm, moving; enlivened at moments by many twinking feet, and as many glittering limbs, literally so, for they wore a sort of metallic tights; enlivened at other times by several excellent comedians, doing things that must have seemed idiotically meaningless, even to themselves—which fact, if true, is a tribute to the entertainment; and true, is a tribute to the entertainment; and enlivened further by some exceptionally fine work of Fay Templeton.

While in the burlesque part, "Sarah Crude," Miss Templeton performed a rare bit of mimicry that one almost resented as a violation of sentiment, her best hit was the imitation of Ethel Barrymore in "Carrots." Lake in manner, in appearance, executions of the sentiment in the sentiment of the sentimen except for a difference in stature, in ex-pression, and marvelously like in voice, Miss Templeton, for the moment, became Miss Barrymore. Nothing could exceed the deli-

Barrymore. Nothing could exceed the deli-cacy of the counterfeiting.

Miss Templeton was never in better voice, and sang one or two songs cleverly; as did Lillian Russell. The latter's star song was the catchy lyric hit of the evening.

The Lillian of fond remembrance was lit-erally swathed and girdled with half the gilttering carbon treasures of the Trans-vaal. One inevitably speculated upon the amount of the bond required of the detect-ive who guards her wardrobe—it must amount of the bond required of the detective who guards her wardrobe—it must reach high into the millions. Lillian's pristine embonpoint has miraculously melted and disappeared, giving way to something like a willowy divinity of form. Despite her weight of jewels she trips lightly.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET IN MEMORIAL HALL

Lovers of music in its purest form filled Memorial Hall last night to hear the Knelsel Quartet of Boston in a typical programme. The concert was given under the auspices of the Union Musical Club of St. Louis. It was an event justifying the kneenest artistic interest.

The players composing this organization are almost above criticism as artists. Un't the close of the present season they were members of the Boston Symphony Orches-tra, from which they have now resigned in order to make a longer American tour than has been their wont, and to revisit Europe in the near future. For years they have stood as the best of their kind in this country. In the musical circles of the O'd World they rank with the best.

gramme. In this there was revealed more fully than seemed attainable in the other numbers the ultimate achievement possible to such an organization. The delicacy and significance of one of the most characteristic Beethoven scores were developed with a sympathy and understanding not to be sur-passed, and the varying phases of the several movements were given with utter truthfulness and a most convincing sin-

Little less pleasing, however, was the opening number, the quaint and elaborately wrought Von Dittersdorf Quartet in E-flat opening major, a composition calling for the high-est musicianly treatment. Of this perhaps allegro and andante movements, which were played in a spirit of the completest com-prehension and with a mastery of effects not to be gained save through years of denot to be gained save through years of de-votion and of congenial and unbroken quartet service. Indeed, the prime delight of the evening, as always when one hears the Kneisel organization, was to note the perfect response of each instrument and the exquisite balance of the whole. It is worth while to spend a lifetime in faithful striv-ing for art's sake if the crowning result is such as now rewards these players. Between the two compositions already mentioned, and completing the programme, came Schubert's posthumous work, the un-came Schubert's posthumous work, the un-finished quartet in C minor, with its one allegro assai movement. This all too brief work was finely presented, so delicately as to intensify the regret which lingers in the soul of the listener because of its uncompleted theme. One could almost imagine something of wistfulness in the applause at its close. There were no encores, the integrity of the carefully arranged programme being insured by a rigid abbase. regard of the carefully arranged pro-gramme being insured by a rigid adherence to its announced numbers. Jackson, Tenn., May 12.—The strike situation in Jackson is practically unchanged. Prominent officials of the M. & O. are in the city, but have made no attempt to hold a conference with the strikers. The injunction granted yesterday by the Federal Court restraining the strikers from intimidating the nonunion men, threatening, pursuading trespassing the M. & O. property, will be tried in this city Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Mary Ann Daggett, 49 years old, wife of Frank E. Daggett, living at No. 115 Lafayette avenue, died at 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the effects of an overdose of chloroform, taken Monday afternoon. Her husband found her unconsclous when he returned from work. Efforts of physicians to revive here were futile.

Charges Son With Theft. Robert Hoesin, 16 years old, was arrested last night at the request of his mother of No. 6 South Jefferson avenue, who says she will apply for a warrant to-day charging her son with the theft of a gold watch, the property of his sister.
